PASSAGE

Last Monday the little village of dining ton- on- Bain deep in the Lincolnshire welds, lot its last contact through public transport with the outside world. Once, Donington (population 236) boasted is own railway station. That closed a generation ago, and on April 1 the two bus services to Lincoln in one direction and South in the other, were withdrawn. Now the villages of Donington, a third of who do not own a car, face a three-mile trek for the nearest bus route.

Lincolnshire is not good bus country, with the population scattered around in little pockets over their flat, rich farmland, the buses have to cover long distances from people to place carrying only a few passengers at a time. The bus companies argue that they don't make enough money on these journeys, and that even using the money they make on the busy routes to pay for the less busy ones they can't make ends meet. So they cut back the service they need. For some the car has taken over.

4 For want of a transport system, the village people have to

1 use their own cars 2 walk long stretches to reach a bus stand

3 stay indoors most of the time 4 take lifts from vehicle owners passing the village

35 Lincolnshire is not a good bus country because

1 it is a mountainous region 2 it is too poor to afford a good bus service

3 it is very far off from the mainland 4 its population is distributed in small pockets over a vast region

36 The bus operators do not want to run their services in Lincolnshire because

1 it is not an economically sound proposition 2 it is risky to ply buses the

3 the passengers do not pay up the fare 4 there is shortage of buses with them

PASSAGE – 1

As a young child, you were not afraid of making mistakes. You were willing to try anything and if you weren't very good at it at first you were like the kitten that missed its first fifty mice: You got a little smarter and a little quicker with every try until finally you mastered ice-skating, sowing or making soup. In fact, if you learned to ice-skate the first thing your body worked out was how to fall down on the ice without getting hurt: how to relax and tuck your legs under you or roll or slide so that you just wouldn't crack your head or break a leg, so that you could come up laughing every time, anxious to try again. 'Failure' was nothing to be ashamed of or avoided. In fact, you welcomed it because you instinctively know that you couldn't learn anything unless you were willing to fail at it first. Thus, as a child you were a natural experimenter, accepting that nobody knows how to throw a ball, swim in deep water, ride a bicycle, or anything else until they give it a try, make an error and give it another try. If children were made in such a way that they were afraid to try new things because they feared failure, they would never get out of their cribs. Likewise, adults who fear failure simply vegetate. Fear of failure becomes fear of success for those who never try anything new.

Comprehension passage

The first season my crop was good enough to satisfy me, especially the beans and potatoes. The next year I did better still, for I dug all the land I needed, about a third of acre, with a spade. I learned from the experience of both years that if one would live simply and eat only the crop which he raised, and raise no more usen he ate, then he would need to plant only a small piece of ground.

Ancient poetry and old stories suggest that farming was once a holy art; but people farm today with unholy haste and thoughtlessness. Our purpose now is merely to have a large farms and large crops. Today the farmer is interested only in the wealth he can obtain from the soil. By greed and selfishness, and a habit of regarding the soil as property, the face of the land is made ugly, farming is lowered in dignity and the farmer leads the meanest of lives.
